Mother and Baughter.

A Paris ourrespondent sends the following translation from Tue Figsr : We related a few days ago that the Comte de X, after being ties, at offiacced to the Princers C., had ended by mar rying her daughter. Here is another history. quite the equal of that in bizarrerie, but different in the detail that the hero of the romance, in place of espousing his first fiances, the daughter, married her morther. Mone, de N. is well known in the monde Parisien, where he is generally designated by the title of 'obryatier."

Two months ago this gentleman made the semaintance, at Dieppe, of Mile. P., a young girl of sixteen, who had come to the seaside accom panied by her anot, sister of her dead father, Mlle. P.'s mother, a lady still young, nor baving wished to quit Paris. Although Mlle. P. is not very pretty, Mons. de N. paid assiduous court to her from the time he learned that she had considerable dot. He gained the good graces of her aunt, established himself in the heart of the young gir., and at the end of several days announced that he had the intention of asking her hand in marriage. Mile. P. found this intention excelent, but replied that before her suiter made the demand it was necessary that he go to Paris and make the acquaintages of her mother.

The aunt, consulted, was of the same opinion; therefore it was agreed that as Mile. P. was to remain still some days at the sesside, Mons. de N. would go to Paris, and under pretence of giving her vews of her daughter, would call upon Mme. P., and do everything possible to in gratists himself with her, to the end of procuring her consent to the marriage. This little plot was carried out to the letter. Two days after her suitor's departure Mitle. P. received a letter from her mother saying that she had received a call from Mons de N. and found him physming. Mille. P. was pleased at the course which things seemed taking. But at the end of several days more she was surprised at re ceiving no letter from Mons de N., who had sworn that he would not suffer a day to pass without writing her. Madame P., too, said not a word more of having seen or heard of him. and, indeed, wrote scarcely more than to tell her daughter she was not yet to think of a return to Paris. Fifteen days passed thus, and still no newsof Mons. de N.

The situation was becoming intolerable, and n spite of her mother's command Mille. P. was about leaving Dieppe when she received a letter from Mme. P., which came like a thunderbolt upon her. Her mother, after having tried to prove how triste it was for so young a woman to remain always a widow, announced that she had decided to marry Mora de N. who had come decided to marry Mons de N., who had come to Paris to ask her in marriage. The blow was terrible for Mille. P; but gifted with great strength of mind, she dissembled her grief, and several days later attended her mother's bridal But the next day she retired into a convent, and dec ared that she would never leave it, her sole carthly wish being to take the veil.

How to SAVE Your EYES .- When will those working by lamplight have the sense to understand the use of shades to protect the eyes? We see persons sitting holding their sewing or other work before or near a lamp, while the light is blazing full in their eyes. It is plain that the object that they work upon cannot be seen with so great distinctness while the field of their retina is already occupied by a blaze. But they worked on for hours, and though the next morning their visual organs tell of the abuve by redness and it flammation, the workers are too dull to learn the lesson of experience offered them. Circular paper shades can be obtained for a few cents, and these not only protect the eyes from the excess of light, but serve as a reflector behind the bisze, iccreasing the illumination one half. Be sides the above mentioned evil there is that of the varying quantity of light thrown into the eye by its being suddenly and alternately directed toward the blaze or obliquely away from it, by which the pupit has not time to adapt itself to the increase of glare, whereas, with the use of the shade, the illumination would be uniform. The number of persons in the community having sno s light or dark in the field of vision, arising from injury to the retina by the ill usages which we are mentioning, is greater than is commonly imagined. It must be borne in mind that these spots are a serious scep toword amaurosis and guttaserena, such as plunged in da: kness the later years of the great Miltor, and many others more eminent for their talents than their caution.

NOBILITY OF LABOR. - Hardly anything is more contempuble than the conceit which rests upon social position; the conceit of those who imagine that they are thus divorced from the clay of common mer; of those who shrink with horror from the idea of work as something that degrades by its contact, and yet who, likely, owe their present position to some not very remote ancestor, who recognizing his call to work, lived more honestly in the world than they do, and was not ashamed of soiled thumbs. It is one of the meanest things for people to be ashamed of the work which glorified their an pestors more, with their soiled aprops and black gowns, than their fine ribto:s and fishy jewel ry. It might be a fine thing to be like a linky, more gloriously clothed than Solomon, and do ing nothing as if we were lillies. Advantageons position is only a more emphatic call for work; and while those who hold the advantage may not be compelled in manual drudgery, they should recognize the fact that manual drudgery may be formed in the same spirit as that which charac er zes their own work, and therefore it is equal ; in morable.

THE 'PERFECT WASHER" will wash bed and table linen, towels, etc., in 10 or 15 min-utes; under clothing and other articles that are nuch soiled will require from 20 to 30 minutes.
